Mr. Lewis P. Winston declared he was the man to levy whenever it was his duty to do so. If any one doubted this they could see the record of the courts, life was a Democrat, and would live and die in the service of his party, He stood at the polls when but fifteen years old and held tickets for voters. He was no speaker and would not attempt any oratory to get votes. The people all knew him. He had friends in the audience, who had taken him from a newsboy and made him Sheriff. It was to such people he trusted his claims.

Colonel M. I., Spotswood having arrived was presented and briefly presented his claims for re-election to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney. He welcomed to the contest his competitors, for no one knew better than himself that no man had a monopoly upon a public office. He felt that he was now more competent to discharge the duties of his office than when elected. He had been in the service of his party ever since he came from college in 1872, and he did not think any one would dare to question his Democracy.

City Servent Echect A. Carter spoke.

FOR SERGEANT.

City-Sergeant Robert A. Carter spoke only a few minutes. He would be thankful for anything his friends could do for him in the way of votes or exerting their inducence in his behalf at the primary. There are eight others besides himself dependent upon the office, and some of these people are men of families. He saw no reason why all should be turned out if they are doug their duty.

Captain C. H. Epps said he had no one but himself dependent upon the office of Sergeant. He had not named his deputies and would not do so until after the election. The only objection he had head urged against him was that he had not resigned his present office. He wanted to know what man holding a position ever resigned until he was elected to another. He asked any one in the audience to name one such case, but there was no response. Some one had started the report, the Captain said, that he did not vote for Fitz Lee. He declared no one in Richmond would make such as sertion to his face, and if he did such a person woud think the fighting editor had been found. The Captain said he was a workingman and was proud of it. He labored as a blacksmith until 1861 and then joined the Blues and fought through the war. He entered this contest to say nothing evil of any candidate, but if any mud was thrown he was going to do his share of it.

T. B. HIGES.

Mr. Thomas B. Hicks said he was after votes for the office of Sergeant. Five men were running, and four were going to be left, and he did not think any one could at this stage of the fight tell with any degree of accuracy who those four would be. He didn't want anybody to bet on Hicks. All he wanted was their votes. He had nothing to say against his competitors. He was out pleading for votes, and he wanted everybody to think long and think well before they scratched the name of Hicks from the ticket. If elected it would make him happy, it would make his wife happy, and would make the little children happy.

Mr. E. Leslie Powell, in beginning his remarks, told some pointed anecdotes which almost convulsed his hearers with laughter. He was a workingman, he said, and desired to be elected to the office of Sergeant. Like Sergeant Carter, he had eight people dependent upon this office. His wife and six children are his deputies. Mr. Powell said he wanted to get on the police force

On being asked if there was any truth in the statement that the Detective's death was caused by drink, Mrs. Wren replied: "Every one knows that Jack had his sprees and that they generally lasted about two months, after which he would be entirely abstenious for six or seven months; then he would commence again. About eight weeks ago he went to New York one Friday evening and returned to Richmond the following Sunday, and at that time he was drukking a good deal, but I took him in hand before he could have a long spree, and he was sober again by Tuesday morning. During this time he was still attending to his business, and though confined to his house continued to do so up to a few days before his death. Shortly after this spree he was taken with the "grippe," which developed into pneumonia, and died very suddenly, as he was supposed to be considerably better when the end came."

Just a few hours before his doath he was making arrangements to send three of his force to Frankin county to investigate the recent fires in Rocky Mount, which were supposed to be the work of incendiaries.

Mrs. R A. Woodall, a neighbor of Mrs. Wren, corroborated the statements of the wife of the deceased, and said that in the many conversations which she had had with Mr. Wren upon the subject of the Madison murder she had never known him to exhibit other than a deep interest and wide in his correct that real.

That Defective Column. To the Editor of the Dispatch:

The pedestal for the Lee monument is in the main an excellent piece of work, and will stand as long as time endures. For that very reason the one defect that mars its symmetry is all the worse. An imperfect column on one of the conspicuous corners is a blotch, and will be a shame to all parties concerned—builder, architect, association, and all who have had anything to do with the work. Shall we gather the veterans here next May and ask them to look upon the statue of their immortal leader supported by a botch?

I noticed the glaring fault some weeks ago and have with difficulty held my peace, hoping some one more competent would call attention and suggest a remedy. But the only publication which has yet appeared is the interview with Mr. Netherwood apologizing for the defect. It occurs to me that this is a thing that ought not to be explained, but should be corrected, and that as speedily as possible. There is ample time to have another made and put in, one that will harmonize with the rest of the work and will not be alasting shame to our city and State.

A Curious Snow Catastrophe.
(By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

WHERLER, COL., March 6.—One of the greatest catastrophes in the way of a snow-slide without loss of life occurred last night five index east of this place at what is known as Walleut, on the High-Line division of the South Park railroad, in which two passenger trains came near being swept away. The train going west was running in sections. The first section got stuck in the snow at Walleut, and the second came up with two powerful engines to pull out the first section. Roadmaster Dobbins was standing in front of the head engine superintending the work when in an instant an availanche of snow came down, sweeping him away. He was completely covered by the flying mass of snow, and carried a distance of several thousand feet entirely across the river and on to the Rio Grande tracks, where he managed to extricate himself with great difficulty. He was severely injured. A tremendous volume of snow was piled entirely over the four engines putting out the fires, and completely buried the mail-car, in which Ferrall, who took her to Evansville, where they stopped to take her back to Owenshoro', and they went on board the boat. He left her, ostensibly to get a bill changed, but he had not returned when the boat started. When Mrs. Coffman learned that Ferrall had not even paid her fare she esized her baby and was about to throw herself into the river, when she was caught by the chambermaid. Half an hour later she made another attempt at suicide, but failed. Dr. Coffman will send her back to her father and will try to have Ferrall arrested for kidnapping the baby. CHOAGO, March 5.—William Jones, a colored man, was taken to the county hospital last night, the victim of an act of fiend-ishness almost unparalleled. Monday night while in the salcon of Benjamin Kersey, at 398 south Clark street, he fell asleep in a chair. Unable to arouse him, George Williams anas "Texas" poured a quart of kerosene-oil over Jones's feet and legs and set fire to them. The unfortunate man was terribly burned about the lower limbs. The hospital physicians fear he will lose the use of his feet. The fiend who committed the act is in hiding. An Open Board of Brokers Raided.

Alexandria Items.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

Alexandria, March 6, 1890.

A stock company was organized in the Board-of-Trade rooms here last night for the purpose of putting up and operating a shoe-factory in this town. Mr. John M. Johnson, the attorney for the company, presented a draft of a charter, and the following officers and directors were elected as corporators: Frederick Paff, president: G. P. Hill, secretary and treasurer; and M. B. Harlow, Henry Smoot, and Henry Strauss, directors. After the meeting adjourned the newly-elected directors held a short meeting and determined to open books of subscription at once. It is expected that the stock will be taken up at once and the factory running here in a short while.

There are already several applicants in the field for the position of meat inspector for this city.
